They Start in the Cellars.

In nearly every case of fire on the west side it has started in the cellar, among a heap of rubbish, in a coalbin or an ash barrel. Janitors have made the rounds, one two and three hours beforehand. They examined every nook and crevice according to custom. They turned out the gas, they have denied the using of kerosene, yet the fire has started and scores of families, men, women and little children have been rudely awakened with the dreadful cry of "Fire."

women and little children have been rudely awakened with the dreadful cry of "Fire."

Fire engines have rushed up to the scene, and fortunately little, if any, loss of life has been recorded. Investigations have followed. The firemen have time and again found enough to warrant the gravest suspicion that the blaze was the work of an incendiary. The police investigate for themselves, and nineteen times in twenty report that the origin of the rie is "unknown."

Of Undoubted Incendiary Origin.

So far as the occupants of the tenements and the stores are concerned, it would be difficult to convince them that every one of the fires was not of incendiary origin. No Arrest— Have Been Made.

Day after day the public has looked for some brilliant piece of detective work that would stop the reign of tertor which started a few weeks after the conviction of some members of the gang referred to The public has looked in vain. Not a single arrest has been made, and nearly every day other mysterious fires are added to the already long list.

There is one man in the city to whom the public look to crush out the gang of fire fiends. That man is Fire Marshal Mitchel. The office of fire marshal was created for just such a purpose. To him were given powers almost absolars.

As the firemen are first on the scene they are the first to make an investiga-

WHO OWNS "MIMIC WORLD?"

The Question Will Be Agitated in Court on Friday.

County Clerk, was a Fire Commissioner for many years and President of the Board. He has been a Tammany man from away back, and the members of the family have been officeholders for years. Henry D. Purroy went out of Tammany with ex-Police Justice and ex-Dock Commissioner White and a few others in 1873, but he got in again five or six years later.

As to Fire Marshal Mitchel, he has held that position so long that many forget just when he was appointed. Lots of people remember him in that position fifteen years ago. He is a Tammany man and one of his brother-inlaw's lieutenants in the Annexed District, following the latter's fortunes wherever the wind blew him. It is an appointive office, removable at will. Some people thought he was retained on his merits as a fire investigator. Others saw in his retention the fine band of Henry D. Purroy, who, whether in the ins or outs, is always a power.

Public Can't Understand It.

Worst Fires the Latest Ones.

During the past few months there has been a veritable reign of terror among the residents of the uptown west side section of the city in consequence of section of the city in consequence of broken out there. The terror has in fact spread even further than that. Flames have been discovered in other sections, in tenements, in stores and even in stables.

Fires have been started at all hours of the day and night, but it is to the west side in particular that the mystery belongs. There, with one or two exceptions, the flames have spread in the nightting when all means the second of the day started at all hours of the day and night, but it is to the west side in particular that the mystery belongs. There, with one or two exceptions, the flames have spread in the nightting when all means there are the fire scare had advanced to about half its present stage, an "Evening World" reporter asked the Marshal what he was doing. Mr. Mitchel got angrey. He denounced the newspapers in unmeasured terms for their sensational" stories, and said that in nineteen cases out of twenty the fires were accidetal. Since then, however, many fires of undoubted incendiary origin have broken out.

The very worst of the mysterious fires have occurred during the past few days. Hundreds of lives have been in the blaze. Property has been destroyed and rental values have deteriorated.

The public, however, has little interest in this. What it wants to know is why there has been no solution of the recent mysterious fires. If the Fire Marshal has grown too old for the service the public wants him to admit it. The public pays for protection from fire-fiends as well as from highwaymen, and it wants to secure it.

Marshal Mitchel has an office on the fourth floor of the Fire Headquarters Building, on East Sixty-seventh street. It is well appointed, and to it he summons all the witnesses who have anything to tell about mysterious fires. He receives them away back at the end of the big room, behind a partition, and as a general rule, he calls in his stenographer to take down the testimony of the witness. His investigation of a fire is of the Star Chamber order.

The Fire Marshal has, ittle use for any newspaper. The latter have a habit of stating cold facts, and reporters have a knack of getting around at or after fires, questioning everybody and going to the bottom of the story.

Werst Fires the Latest Ones. last Summer; it explains the character of the work and its extent:

"The primary object of the corps has always been to care for young children who are suffering from the diseases inof those too poor to pay for medical attendance, but the most important result of the work is its educational effect. It was remarked among the physician during the Summer, that while on their lect of children than formerly, and that it was plain their teaching had not been thrown away. The fact that in spite of the very hot weather this year, sick-ness among the children has not been of as serious a character as formerly is also an evidence that the teachings of former years have resulted in the observation of bitter precautions when the first symptoms of trouble appear.
"The increase of the work this year over that of last, is shown by the following figures: Patients treated 11.753 13.58 13.68 "Whatever the attending physician deems necessary for the recovery of a patient is promptly furnished. The employment of a nurse, the purchase of proper bedding and properly prepared food have all been author.xed at d.fferent times for the welfare of a patient. In a few cases money has been advanced to pay funeral expenses. S.ck adults, who have no physician's care, are, when found, either cared for or referred to a proper institution. The furnishing of groceries to well adults does not come within the scope of our work, but when cases of distress come under our notice we do all we can to relieve them."

This Summer "The Evening World" will add fresh air excursions to the work of the Fund. Two, three, and it may be more, excursions will be given each week. These will cost a great deal of money, as the littie ones and their mothers must be fed during the ten or twelve hours they will be on the water. If you want to help the Sick Bables' Fund send a dime, a quarter or a dollar to the "Cashler of "World," Pulitzer Building, New York City."

SENSATION IN COURT.

Wealthy John W. Dingman Acce of Deception.

The trial of Clarence M. Day, bookeeper for the Lewis & Fowler Manufucturing Company, took place before Justice Goetting in the Lee Avenue Police Court, Williamsburg, to-day, on a charge of assaulting Annie Webber, his wife's maid. Day was a teacher in the Sunday school attached to the First Reformed Church, in Bedford avenue, when he met and married Mattie Ryan, the pretty niece of John H. Dingman, chief elder of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Day what it is that alls them. Many diseases, knows avenue, and Day is stopping at the Arlington Hotel.

Two days ago Day went to his wife's house to get some papers, and it was then that he is charged with pushing the maid so that she fell to the floor.

Day swore his wife deceived him. She represented John H. Dingman as her uncle, and he gave her away. He declares Dingman was not her uncle, but took his wife to the theatre repeatedly, met her secretly in New York and came to his house every day.

The maid swore that Day entered her room in the middle of the night, and when she raised an outery he said he was walking in his sleep and made a mistake in the room.

Justice Goetting held Day guilty of assault and suspended sentence. Dingman is wealthy. He educated Miss Day and always represented himself to be her uncle. She was a social belie before marrying Sunday-School Teacher Day.

Mr. Fisk said in 1861, when he was at Long Branch as correspondent, reporting the movements of President Lincoln, he met Miss Fanny Lyon. He was led to believe she was a daughter of ex-Comptroller Lyon, of Philadelphia. Eight months later they were married. The day before the marriage, he said, the pastor of St. Stephen's Church in Philadelphia told him he had been deceived as to her real name.

On the morning of the marriage he discovered her name was Mary Paullin. About four years after the marriage Mrs. Fisk told him she had been divorced from Benjamin F. White.

Mr. Fisk obtained a decree annulling the marriage in October, 1851. It was set aside. At the second trial judgment was given for Mrs. Fisk. He had the case reopened, so this is the third trial of the suit. was led to believe she was a daughter
